REFLECTION

My approach to the media-focused assignments in this class has been to be as creative, and sometimes bizarre, as possible. This encourages me to think outside the box even when sticking to a theme or genre.

For my Photoshop projects, I decided to go with an old-school, corny horror theme. For my first assignment, I didn't have any experience with Photoshop, so I mainly focused on learning basic tools and applying them to my project. I changed an old ad for veggie tuna casserole to be cannibalistic. Aside from being creepy, this revision was also poking fun at the vegetarian dish by turning it into a carnivorous one. I did some cutting and pasting from other photos such as using the head of a boy. The drips from the can were also originally paint on a paintbrush. I then changed the
